ESTIMATED TOLL OF MORE THAN 65 DEAD, CITY IN UTTER RUIN

Fire Breaks Out to Add to the Horrors of Earthquake and Destruction, Governor of California Officially Informed by Southern Pacific Railroad

Water Mains Wrecked and Firemen Have Limited Facilities With Which to Battle the Flames; Tank Cars With Water Rushed to the Stricken Town

(By United Press)
Sacramento, June 29.—Fire has broken out amid the ruins of Santa Barbara according to word received at the governor's office today. The information was communicated through the Southern Pacific, according to Harry Lutgens, the governor's private secretary.

San Francisco, June 29.—Sixty-five dead had been counted at 10 a. m. in Santa Barbara's earthquake disaster, according to word reaching Southern Pacific headquarters here.

Fire had broken out in several sections of the city and is spreading rapidly. Water mains were wrecked and firemen have limited facilities with which to battle flames.

The Southern Pacific has concentrated all available tank cars with water—five of them—and they are being rushed to the stricken town.

Relief trains from Los Angeles are able to get through almost to Santa Barbara. The old Santa Barbara mission, relic of the early church days, is reported a mass of ruins.

Half of Business Section Levelled

Ventura, Calif., June 29.—Refugees from Santa Barbara arrived here shortly before noon and confirmed reports of the disastrous earthquake there which has taken an estimated toll of more than 65 lives and reduced the city to actual ruins. At least half of the business buildings in downtown districts were partially or wholly demolished. E. B. Hollister, an eye witness, told the United Press.

State Street, the main thoroughfare, is a mass of wreckage, Hollister said.

Practically all the larger buildings of the city were levelled. The California hotel, a new five-story structure, was wrecked—only part of its inside walls were left standing. Bedrooms were exposed and furniture was scattered about the streets. The San Marcos office building was totally destroyed.

The county hospital two miles from the city was partially demolished. Several nurses were slightly hurt by falling debris, but the patients were safely removed.

St. Vincent's orphanage was badly shaken. The walls were crushed and the roof slid off. Nurses removed 150 children to a hillside nearby.

The plant of the Southern California Edison Company was partially wrecked, the generators were badly damaged and the city was without lights or power. Brick residences were destroyed, only frame structures standing the shock.

Brick chimneys on wooden buildings were toppled.

"The first tremors came suddenly at 6:45 and caused practically all of the damage," Hollister said. "There were severe jolts at every half hour afterwards for about three hours."

The city is panic stricken. Women are hysterical and have gathered their more precious possessions and huddled on the lawns of their homes or fled to the hills.

"When I left about ten o'clock there was no way of telling how many persons had been killed or injured. Confusion prevailed and police and newly sworn deputies were having difficulty in organizing relief."

"Hundreds of curious tourists were arriving to get a glimpse of the ruins, but were held away by the newly organized police force. Water mains were broken by the tremors and the streets were flooded. Before I left Red Cross stations were organized for the needy."

COLLAPSE OF GIBRALTAR DAM

Los Angeles, June 29.—A violent earthquake rocked southern California today causing enormous property damage and endangering hundreds of lives.

Unconfirmed reports reaching here from Santa Barbara stated the city was under two feet of water following collapse of Gibraltar dam.

The city was isolated, with rail and wire communication disrupted. Two hotels were in ruins, according to advices.

PRESIDENT'S FATHER SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

PHYSICIANS SAY HE IS ON THE ROAD TO RECOVERY

COLONEL COOLIDGE ABLE TO SIT UP IN BED TODAY

(By United Press)
Plymouth, Vt., June 29.—The president's father showed much improvement today and attending physicians pronounced him practically along the route to recovery.

Dr. J. F. Coupal, official physician of the case at 9 a. m. said, "Aside from the fact that Col. Coolidge's age and heart condition might allow a blood clot to form, there was every reason to believe the danger phase of his illness was rapidly passing away."

Col. Coolidge will be able to sit up in bed today and probably be permitted to leave his bed in two or three days, the announcement said. It was thought safe for Dr. A. F. Chute who performed the operation to leave for Boston this morning.

Though the president intends to remain here several days, he has advised he will probably be able to keep his engagement to deliver an address at Cambridge, Mass., July 3rd at the celebration of the 250th anniversary of George Washington's assumption of command of the continental army.

BULLETIN MAY BE ISSUED LATER

Plymouth, Vt., June 29.—Shortly before 11 A. M. the president's father had a vomiting spell. Young John was sent in a White House car to summon Dr. Coupal who had gone to a farm house a short distance down the road.

Dr. A. M. Cram, the Coolidge family physician, came out of the sick room just before noon appearing less satisfied than the doctors had seemed earlier in the day. He said the vomiting had not been serious or unexpected, but indicated the physicians might issue a bulletin a little later.

WARNS IRISH TO LET POLITICS ALONE

Dublin, June 29.—Addressing a confirmation class at Castlereagh, the Rev. Dr. Dordey implored the children to leave politics alone.

"Politics in Ireland are too full of hatred," he declared. "Love of Ireland is, to many people, merely an excuse for hating your neighbors. That is not genuine love of Ireland. The only way you can help the people is to leave politics alone."

"Why, children, if I had a friend who showed a tendency to take up politics, I would pray to God to change his heart. If I had a little girl friend who took up politics, why I would almost give up praying for her. Women who go around carrying dispatches and arms from one place to another are furies. Who likes them? Who respects them? Who would marry them?"

"Never join their organizations, but do your work as your grandmothers did before you."

Santa Barbara have blocked automobile traffic.

A special relief train is enroute from Los Angeles bearing a corps of Red Cross workers and newspaper men.

The Los Angeles chapter chartered an airplane to carry relief supplies to the district.

Southern Pacific trains south halted by the shock are being re-routed by the Dumbarton cutoff down the valley route.

Santa Barbara is 367 miles south of San Francisco and 104 miles north of Los Angeles.

MANY HONORS SHOWN PRESIDENT WITH FLAGS, ETC.

OFFICE SURROUNDED BY OFFICIAL DEFERENCE OF MANY KINDS

ARMY, NAVY, STATE DEPARTMENTS REGULATIONS HONOR HIM

(By United Press)
Washington, June 29.—The presidency of the United States, based though it is on every principle of democracy, is surrounded by official deference and formal honors such as are granted to few crowned heads. As a man the person who is president is only a citizen but as the President of the United States he is the figure who represents the United States and therefore in army, navy and state department regulations no honor is too great for him.

Since the days of Washington new traditions and precedents have been gathered about the President until now if all the honors to which Mr. Coolidge is entitled were invoked he would spend more time in official ceremonial than in transacting government business. Hence Presidents have had to direct members of their staffs to eliminate fuss except on very official occasions.

Twenty-one Guns

When the President passes or arrives at any military or naval establishment he is entitled to a salute of 21 guns, to have the command paraded at attention, to be saluted by bugles and to have the national anthem played. Were this ceremony invariably adhered to around Washington the army, the navy and the President would be almost perpetually engaged in the process. Therefore it is reserved for formal occasions, though every Saturday when the President embarks on the Mayflower he gets the national anthem and the 21 guns.

When the President attends formal social events he is preceded by buglers who sound his salute and by the national colors and the President's flag carried by a color guard. The detachment stands at attention during the President's presence.

Always First

In the social procedure of the White House the President is always first. He passes through the doorway first, the one gentleman in the land who precedes a lady. He is served first at meals. He may sit when women present are standing. Naturally most Presidents dispense with many of these formalities on most occasions. But the traditional supreme respect due the President of the United States is preserved on official occasions.

Closely Guarded

Respect of the Presidency is not confined to official honors prescribed by tradition and regulation. He is surrounded by every comfort, protection and deference. Secret service men guard him at all times. Doctors examine him daily to keep the most minute watch on his health. Carefully selected foods are served with every finesse to tempt his appetite. In his office a skilled staff ward off all vexatious minor administrative matters. Everything is done to protect his health and spirits so that unhampered he may devote his energies to the important duties of his great office.

MINNESOTA A LEADER IN COUNTY LIBRARIES

Minnesota is a leader among the states providing county library service for its citizens, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, which reports that eight counties in the state are now rendering this type of book service. The counties are: Anoka, Hennepin, Itasca, Meeker, Olmsted, Ramsey, Steele and Washington.

Of the twenty-five states having some county library service only ten, including Minnesota, have eight or more counties handling reading matter on this basis, states the Foundation. In all, there are about 200 counties in the United States where residents may enjoy this service. California leads the nation with 43 counties equipped for this work.

The county library, through its central office and branches, helps to do away with the isolation of farm life, according to the Foundation. It is especially helpful to the families living off the hard road, back in the hills and on lonely prairies, who but for this might have no access to books. Stores, schools and churches are generally used as points for the distribution of the books, and the rural mail delivery and parcel post enable the library to send books directly to any individual in the county. In some states, book autos and trucks make regular trips over the county with a large collection of books thus bringing to the door of the farmer a good selection of reading matter for every member of the farm family.

SOME BUILDINGS AND PROPERTY DAMAGED AT THREE FORKS, WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS

(By United Press)

Butte, Mont., June 29.—Montanans today were still apprehensive over the earthquake shock which rocked most of the state Saturday night and continued with intensity throughout Sunday and Sunday night.

The new tremors have located in the center of the disturbances in the vicinity of Three Forks and Manhattan, little towns about 50 miles east of here.

It is in the surrounding territory that the most violent quakes occurred Saturday when tremors extended into Wyoming, Idaho, Washington and Oregon.

A shift in the main fault under the Rocky Mountains in the Big Belt Mountain district was probably the cause of the trouble in the opinion of President C. H. Clapp of the University of Montana, a noted geologist. He said this region has been long known to have faults, great cracks in the earth.

Much damage and destruction to buildings and property occurred at Three Forks, White Sulphur Springs, Manhattan and at other points but the outstanding sufferers were the railroads.

The Clue to His Door-Mat

By JAMES F. DWYER

WNU Service

IT WAS midnight. In Fifth avenue there were few pedestrians, and a fat man in evening dress, hurrying northward, attracted attention. Six night birds, who thought his actions mysterious, followed a few paces in the rear.

At Thirty-second street a policeman, dozing on the opposite side of the road, straightened himself as he saw the hurrying group coming towards him. Swinging his night stick he crossed over and waited the approach of the little procession.

The Law was a trifle astonished. As he stood looking after the leader of the hurrying squad, he was jostled by the inquisitive ones following, and he became annoyed. He grabbed a straw-batted youth by the shoulder and questioned him.

"What's the matter?" he cried. "Search me," answered the questioned one. "Let me go; I want to see what the old guy is up to."

The policeman lost his temper. He was being treated with disrespect. A festive citizen was running a fool procession over his beat without giving him the least explanation! So he let go of the youth's shoulder and dashed madly after the man in evening dress.

"Here, what's the game?" he panted. "What sort of a stunt are you up to, anyhow?"

The fat man shook off the grip of the Law and ran faster than ever, his outstretched hands circling round each other like the arms of a windmill in a gale.

"Stoop down and I'll tell you," he gasped, as the officer made another effort to restrain him.

"Been doin' that all the way from Twenty-eighth street," gasped the early followers, proud in the possession of that much information. "He's told the cop a joke, an' now the hickory wielder is hittin' the trail with him."

At Forty-eighth street the policeman met the officer on the adjoining beat, and hooking him by the arm he whispered into his ear as he kept pace with the fat man. The new policeman guffawed loudly, and again the angry crowd looked vainly for the humor that seemed apparent to the two guardians of the peace. The first policeman slackened speed, called out a friendly "Good luck" to the fat man, and then returned to his own beat, while his comrade trotted swiftly in his place.

The fat man swung east, down Fifty-third street, and new recruits joined the procession at every yard. But all thirsted vainly for information. Questions put by the newcomers were met with the one answer: "Don't know; look at his hands. Been twisting them round and round all the way from Twenty-eighth street."

Crossing Third avenue the fat man halted suddenly. He knelt down upon the car tracks, and the officer stooped beside him. The crowd pressed round till the swiftly-swung nightstick swept them back. The man in evening dress crawled across the tracks and raked the ground with his fingers.

Presently he leaped to his feet and yelled out excitedly: "It's all right, officer," he cried, and once again his hands started to revolve round each other as he dashed towards the water.

Just here a third policeman was initiated into the mystery that was troubling the crowd, and with a merry laugh he took up a position by the side of the fat man. The crowd cursed collectively. Here was a mystery that had been explained three times to bulky policemen, yet they were kept in ignorance. It wasn't fair. They had a right to know why the man in evening dress was doing the windmill performance with his hands, and why that stunt amused the policeman. Much of their breath was exhausted in strange phrases denouncing the secrecy of the police, but they were determined to see the end.

Near Second avenue a man standing on the sidewalk turned when he heard the noise of the charging squad and contemplated the runners. Then he stepped into the street and crossed over. The fat man chuckled. He whispered to the policeman at his right hand, and the officer dashed ahead. The man in front started to run, but his pursuer overhauled him in a dozen strides, and they rolled on the pavement.

"What's the matter?" gasped the captured one. "What are yer scruffin' me for?"

"This gentleman wants his rubber door-mat," murmured the policeman, relieving his captive of the parcel he carried beneath his arm.

"Hully Gee!" exclaimed the prisoner, rubbing his eyes and staring round him at the crowd. "Where did yer get the mob, an' how did yer know I had it, anyhow?"

"I had you on a string," explained the fat man, holding up a black thread in the light of the street lamp. "I've caught five men who have tried to steal that mat. It's attached to a thousand yards of strong thread, and as they generally grab it when the streets are quiet, the trail is always clear."

FIVE ACRES OF PARKING SPACE

Reserved at Lum Park For The Convenience of Motorists on 4th of July

Plenty of Fun For All, Biggest And Best Observance of Holiday Ever
Held Locally

Five acres of parking space have been reserved at Lum park for the convenience of motorists, to be used for parking automobiles on next Saturday at Brainerd's big Fourth of July celebration.

Lum park is to be given over entirely to the merry-makers on that day, with the assurance from the Brainerd park board and from the local post of the American Legion, under whose auspices the celebration is being staged, that there will be plenty of fun for all and that this will be the biggest and best observance that has been held in the city for many a day.

Brainerd is to be visited by large delegations from rural districts and towns in this vicinity on the Fourth. Several farm communities have all plans made to come to Lum park on that day and to hold their community picnics there in conjunction with the Fourth of July celebration. One or two such picnics were held on the last Fourth at Lum park. This year there will be more. Plans call for the gathering of the picnickers in the morning, staying all day and for the fireworks and dancing in the evening, the younger members of the families going home just long enough to do the chores.

Thanks to Leon Lum's generous gift of additional land to the park, the space available for picnickers is practically unlimited. There will be ample accommodations for all, and it is hoped that an exceptionally large number will take advantage of these facilities, either for family or community gatherings.

Lum park will be beautifully decorated, wearing her best dress for the occasion. A special committee in charge of this feature has gone over the ground, and has planned its decorations accordingly, with the promise that the public will hardly recognize the popular city playground.

Special emphasis is placed on the hillputian parade that will be the opening feature of the celebration Saturday. This type of parade, so popular in all sections of the country, was inaugurated in Brainerd at last year's celebration of the Fourth. This year it will be given more attention and will be staged on a much larger scale.

Business houses will enter floats in this parade, as will also a number of fraternal organizations, and the children of the community. Generous prizes will be offered in this connection. There will be awards for the best decorated floats, prizes to the boy who has the best decorated coaster wagon, the boys being required to plan and decorate their own floats, prizes to the best boy clown, and to the little lady who has the nicest appearing and best decorated doll buggy in that section of the parade. In decorating any entry for the parade, the national colors should predominate, the committee in charge of this feature, advises.

Any boy, girl, business house, or organization is eligible to enter a float, and are asked to get in touch with A. A. Englund, chairman in charge of the parade committee, at once so that the committee may know upon how large a parade to plan. The line of march will not be long, and will be confined to the park alone, so that the children will not be tired out from marching.

Commander George Sweet, of the local post, who is overseeing the plans for the celebration, has called a joint meeting of all of his committees for this Monday evening, to be held at the office of the Brainerd Gas & Electric Company, at which time each committee will report on the work to which it was assigned, and final preparations made for the celebration. With only a few days remaining, it is important that each committee complete its work without delay.

FIVE ACRES OF PARKING SPACE

Reserved at Lum Park For The Convenience of Motorists on 4th of July

Plenty of Fun For All, Biggest And Best Observance of Holiday Ever
Held Locally

Five acres of parking space have been reserved at Lum park for the convenience of motorists, to be used for parking automobiles on next Saturday at Brainerd's big Fourth of July celebration.

Lum park is to be given over entirely to the merry-makers on that day, with the assurance from the Brainerd park board and from the local post of the American Legion, under whose auspices the celebration is being staged, that there will be plenty of fun for all and that this will be the biggest and best observance that has been held in the city for many a day.

Brainerd is to be visited by large delegations from rural districts and towns in this vicinity on the Fourth. Several farm communities have all plans made to come to Lum park on that day and to hold their community picnics there in conjunction with the Fourth of July celebration. One or two such picnics were held on the last Fourth at Lum park. This year there will be more. Plans call for the gathering of the picnickers in the morning, staying all day and for the fireworks and dancing in the evening, the younger members of the families going home just long enough to do the chores.

Thanks to Leon Lum's generous gift of additional land to the park, the space available for picnickers is practically unlimited. There will be ample accommodations for all, and it is hoped that an exceptionally large number will take advantage of these facilities, either for family or community gatherings.

Lum park will be beautifully decorated, wearing her best dress for the occasion. A special committee in charge of this feature has gone over the ground, and has planned its decorations accordingly, with the promise that the public will hardly recognize the popular city playground.

Special emphasis is placed on the lilliputian parade that will be the opening feature of the celebration Saturday. This type of parade, so popular in all sections of the country, was inaugurated in Brainerd at last year's celebration of the Fourth. This year it will be given more attention and will be staged on a much larger scale.

Business houses will enter floats in this parade, as will also a number of fraternal organizations, and the children of the community. Generous prizes will be offered in this connection. There will be awards for the best decorated floats, prizes to the boy who has the best decorated coaster wagon, the boys being required to plan and decorate their own floats, prizes to the best boy clown, and to the little lady who has the nicest appearing and best decorated doll buggy in that section of the parade. In decorating any entry for the parade, the national colors should predominate, the committee in charge of this feature, advises.

Any boy, girl, business house, or organization is eligible to enter a float, and are asked to get in touch with A. A. Englund, chairman in charge of the parade committee, at once so that the committee may know upon how large a parade to plan. The line of march will not be long, and will be confined to the park's alone, so that the children will not be tired out from marching.

Commander George Sweet, of the local post, who is overseeing the plans for the celebration, has called a joint meeting of all of his committees for this Monday evening, to be held at the office of the Brainerd Gas & Electric Company, at which time each committee will report on the work to which it was assigned, and final preparations made for the celebration. With only a few days remaining, it is important that each committee complete its work without delay.

INTERVIEWING THE PRESIDENT

ON a visit in the East we toured to Washington and one of our experiences was joining the crowd of accredited correspondents and thus being one of the group that interviewed him "en masse." President Harding set aside Fridays for these interviews and on that special occasion it followed closely on the heels of a cabinet meeting.

The President is never quoted. President Harding also had a rule that no questions were to be asked at the interview. He only answered written queries that had been submitted some 24 hours previously. At the time one tourist newspaper man forgot himself and asked a question and was speedily squelched by his indignant conferees.

President Harding spoke in a colloquial way and we remember when he answered the question, "Will marines be placed on trains to guard the mail?" he answered with something that sounded a good deal like "that's all bunk." We believe, in this case, it is permissible to quote him now that he is gone.

We have not had the pleasure of seeing Coolidge and so it is with some curious concern that we scan the editorial expression of the St. Paul Daily News which pictures "Cal's" sessions with the newspaper folks.

Coolidge measures his words. No one ever accused him of being verbose.

It has long been the rule that the president must not be quoted by newspaper correspondents. Twice each week—Tuesday noon and Friday, 4 p. m.—the correspondents gather around the president's desk for enlightenment on current subjects of interest. They write what they learn, but they must not attribute their information to the president.

They must say, "A White House spokesman says," "It is learned at the White House," "Those close to the president say," "The White House let it be known," "According to an intimate friend of the president," or some one of the other mysterious phrases to which newspaper readers have become accustomed. But they must not say, "The president says."

The president confines his discussion of events and policies almost entirely to a process of answering questions. These are submitted in written form by the correspondents 10 minutes preceding the interview. Some he answers at length, some briefly, and some not at all.

Present at these interviews is one of the president's stenographers, who keeps a record of every word spoken. This is for the president's protection against misquotation. That is to say, it is to prevent any correspondent from attributing to "The White House spokesman," "A close friend of the president," or any of the other disguises, something which the president did not say.

Occasionally the president has seen fit to deny certain statements attributed to himself in this indirect, round-about manner. Then correspondents have sought and obtained access to the official stenographer's notes to settle the question of accuracy.

Without going into the question of which proved to be correct, the president or the correspondent, there is this to be told: The president has stopped all access by correspondents to the stenographer's notes and has also ordered that the correspondents, who happen to be stenographers also, may not take stenographic notes.

This would seem to end the usefulness of the president's conferences with newspapermen. It would leave a president free to repudiate any statement concerning his views that displeased him or concerning which he might change his mind after he had spoken.

The correspondent is now without protection and, to be safe, must write solely to please.

The St. Paul Daily News does not get the right viewpoint. The president, in his official capacity, represents a nation and millions of Americans. His utterances, if misconstrued, may provoke a world of trouble. If you left the president no exit in case of a mistake on the president's part, it would cause a quandary in state department circles. The utterances of a president are to be weighed with care. A president is as human as a newspaperman, and both may sometimes slip in their viewpoint. A newspaperman can retract, while a president would be left in an awkward position if he had to come out publicly and say a statement he had made was wholly in error, in other words, he didn't know what he was talking about.

The president exercises the utmost care in the preparation of his speeches. Formal ones are printed weeks in advance and copies are sent to newspapers with time of release clearly stated and then only published if telegraphic release orders from the various press associations follow.

The average reporter has but one boss. The president, in a way, is the employee of millions of Americans and his utterances define American policy at home and abroad. The job of president is a real man's job and no part of the job is more difficult than answering the volley of questions hurled at the chief executive twice a week.

THANKED THE DISPATCH

THE Eagle Roller Mill Company of New Ulm, whose officers and salesmen visited in the Brainerd Lake Region, traveling by three special Red busses, were pleased with their reception in Brainerd and at Breezy Point Lodge and George W. Haynes, of the company, indited this letter:

"We thank you for the writeup in your daily paper regarding our sales convention trip in Northern Minnesota last week. We are pleased to advise that our convention was a wonderful success in all respects. The weather was ideal and all members of the party most congenial. Hope that we may spend a week in the lake country again next summer."

We hope so too and wish they would make a night control in Brainerd or at the nearby lakes.

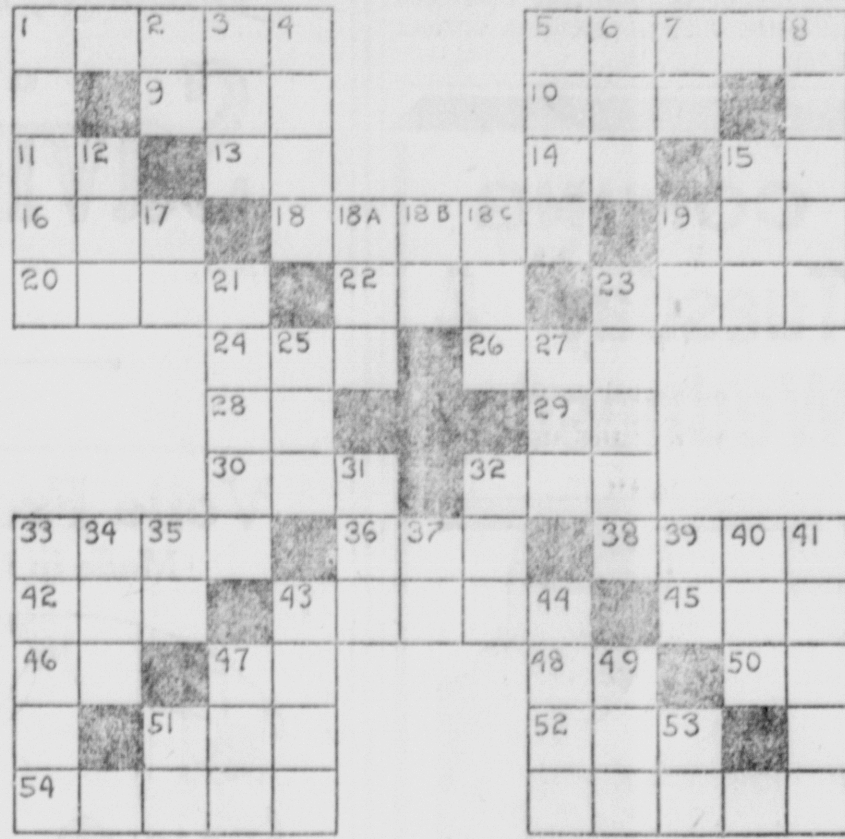

WE have all read about President Coolidge's summer White House on the coast of Massachusetts. Not to be outdone in capitol, the Pequot Review says Congressman Harold Knutson of our sixth district has established his summer capitol on the point between Trout and Big Whitefish lakes, on the east side of Trout lake thoroughfare.

WHEN the telephone companies lost some $200,000 in telephone poles and other equipment, caused by recent storms, enough to buy a lot of conservation went to waste, says Alvah Eastman.

TODAY'S DISPATCH CROSS WORD PUZZLE

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle is a spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which with the white spaces up to the first black square in the right, and a number under the "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black square below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Occasionally the president has seen fit to deny certain statements attributed to himself in this indirect, round-about manner. Then correspondents have sought and obtained access to the official stenographer's notes to settle the question of accuracy.

Without going into the question of which proved to be correct, the president or the correspondent, there is this to be told: The president has stopped all access by correspondents to the stenographer's notes and has also ordered that the correspondents, who happen to be stenographers also, may not take stenographic notes.

This would seem to end the usefulness of the president's conferences with newspapermen. It would leave a president free to repudiate any statement concerning his views that displeased him or concerning which he might change his mind after he had spoken.

The correspondent is now without protection and, to be safe, must write solely to please.

The St. Paul Daily News does not get the right viewpoint. The president, in his official capacity, represents a nation and millions of Americans. His utterances, if misconstrued, may provoke a world of trouble. If you left the president no exit in case of a mistake on the president's part, it would cause a quandary in state department circles. The utterances of a president are to be weighed with care. A president is as human as a newspaperman, and both may sometimes slip in their viewpoint. A newspaperman can retract, while a president would be left in an awkward position if he had to come out publicly and say a statement he had made was wholly in error, in other words, he didn't know what he was talking about.

The president exercises the utmost care in the preparation of his speeches. Formal ones are printed weeks in advance and copies are sent to newspapers with time of release clearly stated and then only published if telegraphic release orders from the various press associations follow.

The average reporter has but one boss. The president, in a way, is the employee of millions of Americans and his utterances define American policy at home and abroad. The job of president is a real man's job and no part of the job is more difficult than answering the volley of questions hurled at the chief executive twice a week.

THANKED THE DISPATCH

THE Eagle Roller Mill Company of New Ulm, whose officers and salesmen visited in the Brainerd Lake Region, traveling by three special Red busses, were pleased with their reception in Brainerd and at Breezy Point Lodge and George W. Haynes, of the company, indited this letter:

"We thank you for the writeup in your daily paper regarding our sales convention trip in Northern Minnesota last week. We are pleased to advise that our convention was a wonderful success in all respects. The weather was ideal and all members of the party most congenial. Hope that we may spend a week in the lake country again next summer."

We hope so too and wish they would make a night control in Brainerd or at the nearby lakes.

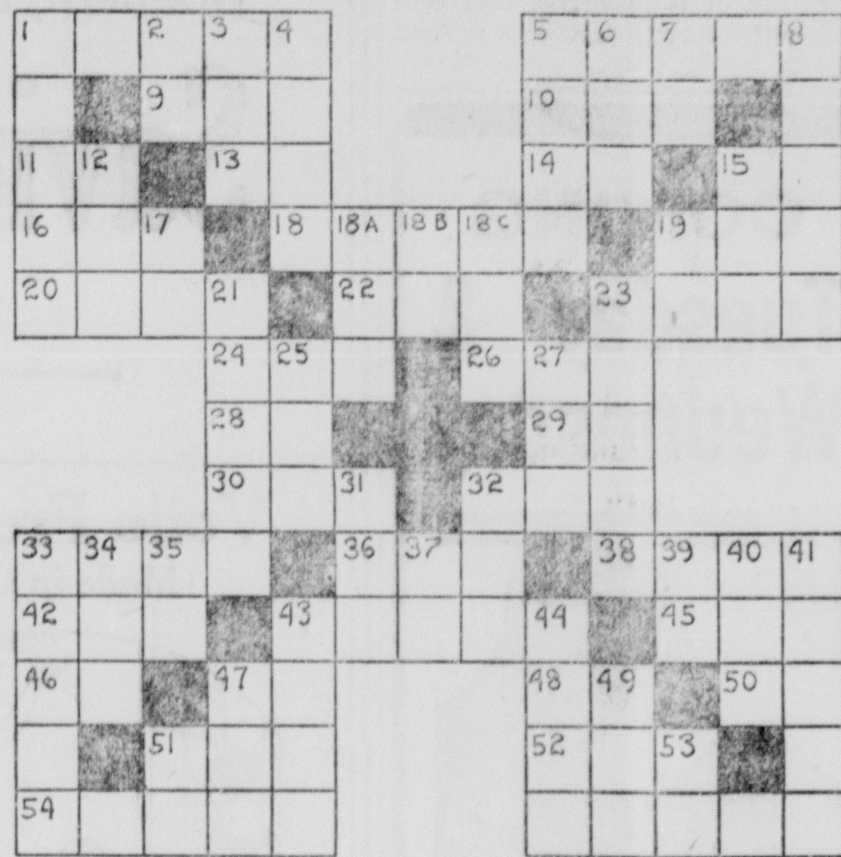

WE have all read about President Coolidge's summer White House on the coast of Massachusetts. Not to be outdone in capitol, the Pegot Review says Congressman Harold Knutson of our sixth district has established his summer capitol on the point between Trout and Big Whitefish lakes, on the east side of Trout lake thoroughfare.

WHEN the telephone companies lost some $200,000 in telephone poles and other equipment, caused by recent storms, enough to buy a lot of conservation went to waste, says Alvah Eastman.

TODAY'S DISPATCH CROSS WORD PUZZLE

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle spells words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

THE BANE OF CLASS HATRED

THERE is no greater hindrance to human happiness, at the present time, than class hatred. It is the evil spirit of the age. There can be no real peace where it lurks. It is not peculiar to any climate, but it flourishes most in what is called "the older of civilizations."

The ancient kings and conquerors of far off days with the transitory glory that was their boast, have long since become dust. Their names are not vaguely remembered, but the hatred that fired their souls with its vengeful purpose still lingers, and across the remnant of their dominions "like a wounded snake drags its slow length along."

It is the class, racial and religious hatreds that make the problems of the old world so difficult of solution, and perpetuate the barbarous spirit of intolerance by which the Turk is animated in his unrelenting cruelty towards the Christian people who are at his mercy.

Hatred in any form is responsible. It should have no place anywhere in this era of enlightenment. There is no surer sign of a nation's progress than its freedom from hatred of every kind, class, racial, religious or whatever form its evil spirit may assume.

While we are happily free, in this land of equal opportunity, from the odious forms of hatred, which make calamity of so long a life in other countries, we should be alert to combat it in any shape.

It can assume many disguises, but its most dangerous aspect on American soil is in the form of class hatred. Whoever advocates it is an enemy of the Republic which is based on the principles that "all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Whoever tries to subvert this sound American doctrine by stirring up class hatred is an enemy of our institutions under which every law-abiding citizen is free to work out his own destiny. When we consider the havoc hatred has wrought abroad we should guard against its insidious appearance in any form in our own country.

It is particularly appropriate that the thoughts of men should turn to the teachings of the Prince of Peace in whose heart there was no room for hatred.

LABOR ORGANIZATIONS SAFEGUARD THE WORKERS' LIBERTIES

By the E. L. C. League.

THE members of organized labor do not take enough pride in the achievements of the labor movement. No other institution has a record of practical accomplishments for the general welfare that will compare with what organized labor can boast.

It has become the habit nowadays to assail unions and besmirch their members, the paid hirelings of selfish and sinister employers' organizations devote a great deal of subtle arguments trying to tear down and misrepresent the union movement. This propaganda has had its effect on many who have no means of acquainting themselves with labor's aims, methods and accomplishments.

Members of organized labor, however, should not be ignorant of the beneficent work done by the unions. It is not necessary to assume a defensive attitude for organized labor. It has made mistakes and the surprise is that they have not been more grievous and more numerous than they are.

In making comparison between the good and evil effects of organized labor the latter may well be considered neglible when the far-reaching benefits are taken into consideration.

The labor union is the only organization representing the mass of the people which strive for enlarged opportunity and protection against oppression by the powerful. This is an age of organization and the individual is helpless to cope with the oppressive forces unless he is associated with others in his class.

Nearly all great social reforms have had their germ or their fostering care in the labor union, and have been brought to full fruition through labor's efforts.

Social legislation such as child labor laws and laws for the protection of the unorganized men, women and children have been proposed and supported by union workers. The labor movement is a growing institution and has no fixed goal. When one evil is overcome and one good deed is accomplished, the effort along these lines is continued. Organized labor is the great driving force of civilization. It places no limitation or restriction on human progress, and spends its time, talent and money to advance the general welfare.

We ask, what other institution has carried out such an unselfish purpose?

AN OPEN CONFESSION

THE following is an account of a conversation between a member of Louisville Typographical Union No. 10, and a man who never held a card:

"I have worked for one firm in this city for forty-six years, and it is the only place I have ever worked. Have been foreman for thirty years, and when I quit last January the firm presented me with a watch, but no pension to comfort me in the latter part of my life. I never joined Typographical Union No. 10, although I was frequently asked to do so. I realize I could have done the union some good. I am satisfied of that. I never received the wages that the union scale called for in all those years. If I had joined No. 10, I would now be drawing the old age pension, and would have been protected by the mortuary benefit and a resident in the Union Printers Home if my health failed me, and the difference I would have received in wages would double the amount I would have to pay for any assessments. The union way is the best way for any one who has a trade or calling, both in sentiment and as a business proposition. The watch I received is very nice in its way—if it gets broke, I can have it repaired; at 7, 12 and 6 o'clock I can see it is breakfast, dinner and supper time; on opening the case I can read the engraving 'For long and efficient service,' etc., which places me in an embarrassing position if I should ever be so unfortunate as to want to pawn it or sell it."

WITHOUT the union all labor would still be the victim of the long day, the insufficient wage and kindred injustices. Under the present organization of society, labor's only safeguard against a retrogression to former inhuman standards is the union.—Commission on Social Justice, Central Conference of American Rabbis.

I REJOICE at every effort workmen make to organize. I hail the labor movement. It is my only hope for democracy. Organize, and stand together! Let the nation hear a united demand from the laboring voice.—Wendell Phillips.

I LOOK to the trade unions as the principal means for bettering the condition of the working classes.—Prof. Thorold Rogers, University of Oxford.

THE BANE OF CLASS HATRED

THERE is no greater hindrance to human happiness, at the present time, than class hatred. It is the evil spirit of the age. There can be no real peace where it lurks. It is not peculiar to any climate, but it flourishes most in what is called "the older of civilizations."

The ancient kings and conquerors of far off days with the transitory glory that was their boast, have long since become dust. Their names are not vaguely remembered, but the hatred that fired their souls with its vengeful purpose still lingers, and across the remnant of their dominions "like a wounded snake drags its slow length along."

It is the class, racial and religious hatreds that make the problems of the old world so difficult of solution, and perpetuate the barbarous spirit of intolerance by which the Turk is animated in his unrelenting cruelty towards the Christian people who are at his mercy.

Hatred in any form is responsible. It should have no place anywhere in this era of enlightenment. There is no surer sign of a nation's progress than its freedom from hatred of every kind, class, racial, religious or whatever form its evil spirit may assume.

While we are happily free, in this land of equal opportunity, from the odious forms of hatred, which make calamity of so long a life in other countries, we should be alert to combat it in any shape.

It can assume many disguises, but its most dangerous aspect on American soil is in the form of class hatred. Whoever advocates it is an enemy of the Republic which is based on the principles that "all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Whoever tries to subvert this sound American doctrine by stirring up class hatred is an enemy of our institutions under which every law-abiding citizen is free to work out his own destiny. When we consider the havoc hatred has wrought abroad we should guard against its insidious appearance in any form in our own country.

It is particularly appropriate that the thoughts of men should turn to the teachings of the Prince of Peace in whose heart there was no room for hatred.

LABOR ORGANIZATIONS SAFEGUARD THE WORKERS' LIBERTIES

By the E. L. C. League.

THE members of organized labor do not take enough pride in the achievements of the labor movement. No other institution has a record of practical accomplishments for the general welfare that will compare with what organized labor can boast.

It has become the habit nowadays to assail unions and besmirch their members, the paid hirelings of selfish and sinister employers' organizations devote a great deal of subtle arguments trying to tear down and misrepresent the union movement. This propaganda has had its effect: on many who have no means of acquainting themselves with labor's aims, methods and accomplishments.

Members of organized labor, however, should not be ignorant of the beneficent work done by the unions. It is not necessary to assume a defensive attitude for organized labor. It has made mistakes and the surprise is that they have not been more grievous and more numerous than they are.

In making comparison between the good and evil effects of organized labor the latter may well be considered neglible when the far-reaching benefits are taken into consideration.

The labor union is the only organization representing the mass of the people which strive for enlarged opportunity and protection against oppression by the powerful. This is an age of organization and the individual is helpless to cope with the oppressive forces unless he is associated with others in his class.

Nearly all great social reforms have had their germ or their fostering care in the labor union, and have been brought to full fruition through labor's efforts.

Social legislation such as child labor laws and laws for the protection of the unorganized men, women and children have been proposed and supported by union workers. The labor movement is a growing institution and has no fixed goal. When one evil is overcome and one good deed is accomplished, the effort along these lines is continued. Organized labor is the great driving force of civilization. It places no limitation or restriction on human progress, and spends its time, talent and money to advance the general welfare.

We ask, what other institution has carried out such an unselfish purpose?

AN OPEN CONFESSION

THE following is an account of a conversation between a member of Louisville Typographical Union No. 10, and a man who never held a card:

"I have worked for one firm in this city for forty-six years, and it is the only place I have ever worked. Have been foreman for thirty years, and when I quit last January the firm presented me with a watch, but no pension to comfort me in the latter part of my life. I never joined Typographical Union No. 10, although I was frequently asked to do so. I realize I could have done the union some good. I am satisfied of that. I never received the wages that the union scale called for in all those years. If I had joined No. 10, I would now be drawing the old age pension, and would have been protected by the mortuary benefit and a resident in the Union Printers Home if my health failed me, and the difference I would have received in wages would double the amount I would have to pay for any assessments. The union way is the best way for any one who has a trade or calling, both in sentiment and as a business proposition. The watch I received is very nice in its way—if it gets broke, I can have it repaired; at 7, 12 and 6 o'clock I can see it is breakfast, dinner and supper time; on opening the case I can read the engraving 'For long and efficient service,' etc., which places me in an embarrassing position if I should ever be so unfortunate as to want to pawn it or sell it."

WITHOUT the union all labor would still be the victim of the long day, the insufficient wage and kindred injustices. Under the present organization of society, labor's only safeguard against a retrogression to former inhuman standards is the union.—Commission on Social Justice, Central Conference of American Rabbis.

I REJOICE at every effort workingmen make to organize. I hail the labor movement. It is my only hope for democracy. Organize, and stand together! Let the nation hear a united demand from the laboring voice.—Wendell Phillips.

I LOOK to the trade unions as the principal means for benefiting the condition of the working classes.—Prof. Thorold Rogers, University of Oxford.

A NEW SYSTEM OF CELESTIAL GUIDANCE HAS BEEN INVENTED
PROBLEM OF SUCH NAVIGATION DIFFICULT ONE TO SOLVE

Washington, June 29.—Winging across barren wastes of jagged arctic ice in the polar sea, searching for an unknown, unforded continent aviators of the MacMillan-navy expedition this summer will steer only by the midnight sun and the arctic moon, both of which can be seen at once.

Following the needle of the magnetic compass in the ordinary "dead reckoning" of marines and aviators in milder climes would lead them in circles until their fuel was exhausted and they crashed to disaster on the terrible edges of perpetual ice.

American scientists have devised a new system of celestial guidance, and the expedition, heading north today in the steamers Bowdoin and Peary, is carrying unique charts and determinations to enable the three amphibian planes to wing their ways from the cold headland of Cape Thomas Hubbard, in Axel Heiberg island, into the unknown and return.

The problem of navigation was one of the most difficult of the preparations for the trip, and Lieutenant-Commander Byrd, in charge of the navy fliers, devoted special time and attention to this phase.

The "Magnetic Pole"

The "magnetic pole" which attracts the compass point is 1,200 miles south of the north pole. At times in their flights in the unknown area of 1,000,000 square miles between Alaska and Canada and the north pole, the aviators will be between the north and magnetic poles, and the compass needle will point south instead of north. At other points in the flights the compass will point in nearly all directions except north, because all the operations of the expedition will be in territory north and mostly east of the magnetic pole. The deviations of the compass range from 100 to 180 degrees.

The deviation from normal of the compass-point cannot be measured, for the deviation changes during every 25 or 30 miles of flight, and since the land has never been explored by man, the degree of deviation has never been measured.

Practical and Simple

Methods heretofore in existence for locating positions in the arctic regions by celestial observation have been cumbersome and entirely unadaptable to be used on an airplane going 120 miles an hour, but G. W. Littlehales, hydrographic engineer of the navy department has worked out a method that is practical and simple.

The method consists of taking the altitude of the sun on a specially constructed chart without long mathematical calculations. This figure is known as the "Summer Line." Another "line" is obtained by taking the latitude of the moon, which will be visible a large part of the time. The intersection of these two lines on a chart will show the position.

The problem of getting altitude of the sun was difficult, mariners at sea have instruments to measure the number of degrees of altitude, but this is impossible in the arctic because the ice-covered horizon is too irregular and inaccurate. Some explorers on ships have carried an "artificial horizon"—a heavy circle, but this cannot be carried on a plane. So Littlehales developed an artificial horizon sextant which supplies this horizon by means of a bubble in liquid.

Greenwich Time

The exact Greenwich time must be known when these observations are taken. Special small chronometers, to give this, have been made for the planes, one to give Greenwich mean time and the other Greenwich sidereal time.

There are likely to be strong winds across the arctic sea. A 30-mile gale would blow a plane 90 miles off her course in three hours. So an instrument has been devised to enable a correction for the wind. It is used with smoke-bombs, which are thrown on the water or ice, sights being taken from the smoke thus made. Through this, the direction over the earth can be calculated, and with the speed of the plane through still air being known, a mathematical calculation of the speed of the wind can be calculated. The fliers will be equipped with calculators to do this figuring quickly without the aid of trigonometry.

Littlehales has worked out a chart to serve the fliers the same as the "Mercator projection charts" serve navigators of quieter seas. On the Mercator charts, distances of up to 600 miles are assumed to be on a straight line, the curvature of the earth being disregarded. On a polar chart the line becomes a spiral, due to the fact the world is only a few hundred miles in circumference up there.

A "sun compass" was constructed to take the place of the magnetic compass. It consists of a tiny post, the shadow of which will enable the pilot to steer this spiral course, without the magnetic deviations which otherwise would enter.

Lively's stock of Ford parts is complete in every detail. Open day and night. 931

To Waterproof Shellac

A shellac finish on furniture or woodwork can be made fairly waterproof by the application of two or three coats of banana "oil." The last coat of shellac must be sand-papered as smooth as possible, and the liquid applied generously with a soft brush such as is used for varnish, says Popular Science Monthly. Each coat should be sand-papered lightly. Shellac treated in this way dries with a dull finish, but can be brightened by the application of furniture wax.

BUSY WOMEN OF 1925

NEW BATHING SUITS

By HEDDA HOYT

(Fashion Editor of the United Press)
(Written for the United Press)

New York, June 29.—Thousands of new bathing suits appeared on the beaches about New York this month and one gains the idea that the popularity of the one-piece knit suit is waning, since the majority of models were of cotton-dress type.

The women who wore one-piece garments seemed to be either formless flappers or fat matrons—neither of whom added beauty to the beaches. Color is plentiful this year. Suits, caps and wraps can't be too colorful and since many of them are of figured designs, they are very conspicuous. Very few silk suits were worn about New York. Cretonnes, ginghams and India linens were materials generally chosen and these were often combined with plain materials.

Many suits were made of printed bordered material with plain bodice and bloomers and with front and rear apron skirts made of the border. Little childish gingham frocks were worn with rubberized belts placed low on the hips. A tall blonde wore such a suit of pink and white checked gingham with white belt. The skirt of her frock was extremely short, displaying little ruffled bloomers.

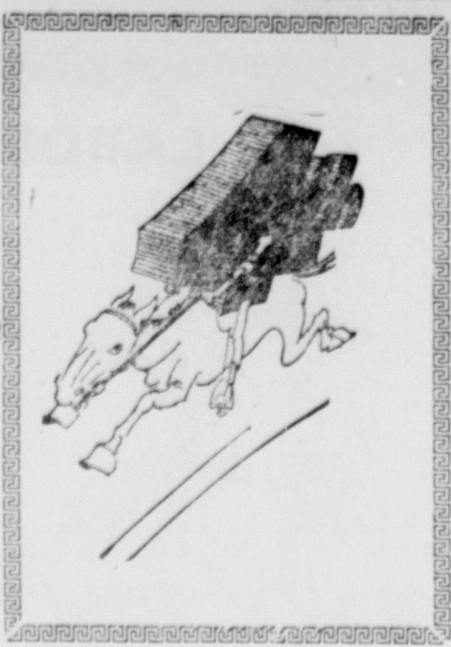

Frocks combining silk and cretonne were numerous. One lovely model had its bodice made of henna satin with its skirt portion made of printed cretonne in henna shades. A little kneelength beach coat of the cretonne was lined in henna. Short beach coats, by the way are extremely smart this season. They are wrap-about models and some of them have hemborders of fringe.

A black taffeta model in straight-line dress effect had a 5-inch ruffle of black cretonne figured in pink roses extending from the right shoulder to the left knee. A long cape of the cretonne accompanied this.

A blonde bathing suit made its appearance at Long Beach. This was made of heavy satin in dress effect with a wide bright red belt about the hips. Cap accompanying this outfit was brilliant yellow.

The Luxury of Sleep

O. Lawrence Hawthorne

"Now I lay me down to sleep"—
Oh, what a happy phrase!
Enwrapped in folds of slumber deep,
While stars their faithful vigil keep,
Our barks across the darkness creep
Between two busy days.

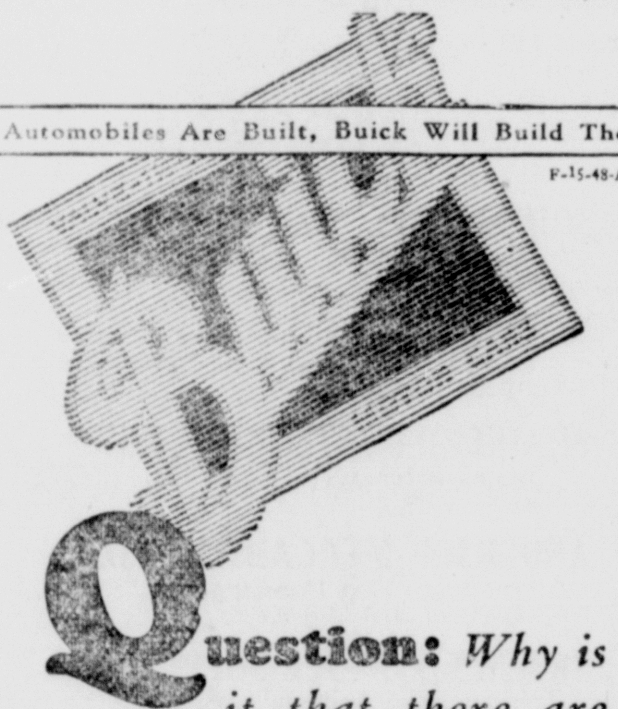

Afar we float on spirit wings
Beyond the vaulted sky;
We soar to realms of mystic things
And drink of youth's eternal springs,
While Mother Nature gently sings
A soothing lullaby.

Of men asleep, it matters not
How humble they may be;
In sleep we know a common lot;
All strife and burdens are forgot
When each has found his friendly cot
And sails the Morphean Sea.

The luxury of sweet repose
Bids petty cares be gone!
When men their weary eyelids close
The spark of genius brighter glows;
They gain the might that sleep bestows
And gayly greet the dawn.

CONDITIONS IN MINNESOTA GOOD

The year 1925 should be a good year in Minnesota, says the weekly bulletin of the state board of immigration. Surveys made show that outlook for the 1925 crop is very good. With plenty of moisture and warm weather crops have advanced rapidly during the past month. Reports indicate that this should prove a very satisfactory year for corn. It is too early to give accurate estimates of July and August. All crops have a good start at the present time and with average conditions during the next two months the harvest should prove very satisfactory.

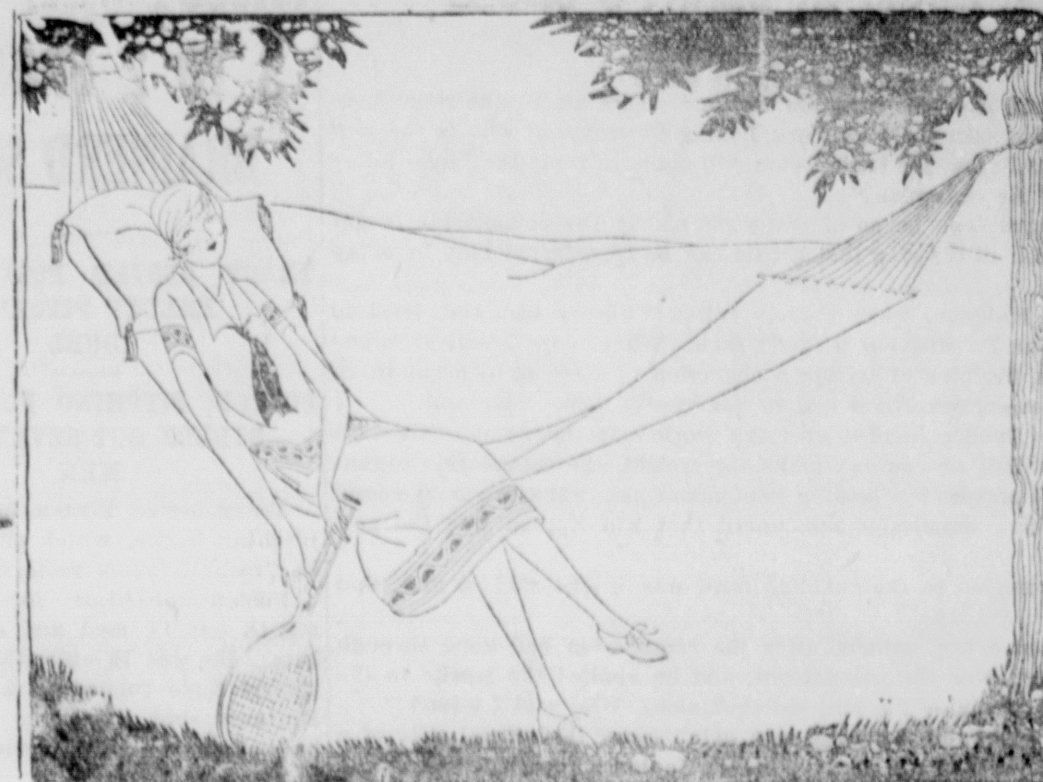

Industrial conditions in Minnesota have shown a marked improvement during the past two months. There has been an increased demand for labor of all kinds, except possibly in the demand for labor in railroad repair shops. A report just made public by the United States Employment Service is very encouraging and indicates that an era of prosperity is at hand in Minnesota and the entire Northwest. This report points out the following things showing increased activity in this state:

"Iron mining is proceeding on a scale that gives evidence that last year's record will be eclipsed. Common labor is in heavy demand, especially for railroad construction, road building and farm requirements. "Building is active and idleness among mechanics is small. Farm machinery plants continue to employ capacity forces. Better call for clerical help than during April.

"Shoe factories, meat packing, wholesale hardware, millinery and grocery concerns, as well as other leading lines, are employing normal forces for this reason."

In addition to the marked industrial improvement, the increased demand for labor of all kinds and the bright outlook in agriculture there is an increased demand for improved farm lands.

During the past three months the Immigration Department has been checking up on parties who had previously written to the department asking for information regarding Minnesota lands, but who apparently had not visited the state or shown any further interest in locating here. This check indicates that in most of these cases the parties are still interested in Minnesota and intend to

STILL ROOM IN BENNY'S SHOES

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

New York, June 29.—When another vacancy occurs among the ring champions and some one asks the New York Boxing Commission who is the new champion, it is likely that the commission will quote in reply that good line—"I'll bite, who is the champion?"

Sad results have been borne of two attempts by the commission to get around the tradition of the ring that a title can be transferred only by a tap on the whiskers.

The Duke of Muldoon, when he was ruling with the iron rod, tried to establish champions by edict but it didn't take. When more practical minds subdued the Duke, the plan of getting a champion by common consent in an elimination tournament was tried and it was hardly more successful.

When Johnny Dundee handed over the world's featherweight title with the announcement that he couldn't make the weight, the commission organized a tournament among the leading contenders and when the final round had been staged the commission announced that Kid Kaplan was the new world's champion.

The general reaction to the announcement was—"Who said so and what of it?"

Dundee reduced a few pounds, after the commission had gone through the labor of putting over the tournament, and he applied the works to the whole thing when he said—"I'm still the champion. Who said I wasn't?"

Even if the featherweight tournament didn't carry the official title of a champion for the winner, it did produce in Kid Kaplan a good fighter and one who perhaps can beat any one who disputes his claim, but the lightweight tournament which came after Benny Leonard retired, turned out to be a flivver.

Jimmy Goodrich of Buffalo and Stanislaus Loayza of Chile, survived the semi-final round of the eliminations and they are to meet for the "title" here on July 6. Neither one can be taken seriously as a champion. It isn't the commission's fault that such ordinary timber came through to the finals, but the idea is wrong.

The theory of an international tournament is fine but it isn't practical as it is too big a job to handle and the matter of finances is too difficult to arrange to get the leading fighters interested.

Sammy Mandell and Sid Terris, two worthy candidates for the title, made much more money by remaining out of the tournament than they would have if they had bound themselves to work on any dates set by the commission. Mandell was in one round, of course, but he was forced into it by the commission.

Three years ago when Man o' War was retired to the stud it was the general opinion that there never would be another one like him. He was judged the super-horse, the last word in the skill of crossing blood lines to develop the perfect horse. Now there comes along his son, the handsome American Flag, and smart turfmen believe that he has it in him to equal the fame and glory of his sire.

It just goes to show how long fame lasts. Three years ago, sport fans were acclaiming the greatest swimmer that ever lived. Now if you happen to mention his name you might be asked—"Who is Norman Ross?" Three years from now you may hear—"Who was Johnny Weismuller?"

No record is safe in these advanced days when improvement in form is getting so much more out of physical strength than it did ten years ago. There are two records that look to be safe for many years, however—the mark for the hundred-yard dash and Babe Ruth's home run record.

Human speed seems to have reached its limit in sprinting. The nine-second man never may live but some authorities like Lawson Robertson, the head track coach of the American Olympic team, believe that most anything can happen.

McGRAW CLAIMS BALL TOO LIVELY, MEN IN DANGER

GIANT LEADER VIRTUALLY DEMANDS STANDARDIZED BASEBALLS

PLAYERS SAY PITCHERS AND INFELDERS IN DANGER OF THEIR LIVES

By HENRY L. FARRELL

New York, June 29.—General protest against the use of the lively ball are causing so much stir among the players and the managers in the major leagues that the owners may have to make some changes to protect the players.

Ever since Babe Ruth started the voyage for long hitting the players have contended more life was put in the ball, but the charge was steadfastly denied by the presidents of the two leagues.

This year the players claim that the ball is livelier than ever and they complain that pitchers and infielders are actually in danger of their lives.

John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, came out today with virtually a demand that something be done to standardize the ball. He said there was no doubt the ball being used now was too lively and it was a grave danger to the players.

More players have been hurt already this season than in any two seasons in the past, and it does not seem that clumsy fielding is the cause or that pitching has become so inferior that ordinary batters can knock the hide off the ball.

Although ball manufacturers maintain that no change has been made in the specifications, there is no way to explain the fact that 579 homers have been rapped out this year. This time last year there were only 348.

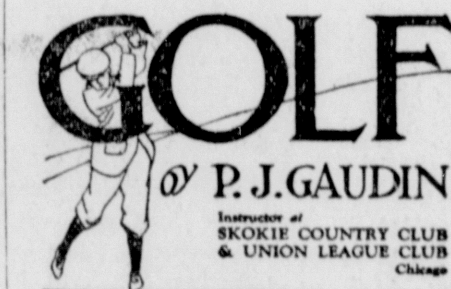

McGraw is not the only manager to admit that there is something wrong with the ball, but he is the first to demand a change.

"The loss of the big lead we had early in the season is not due entirely to our misfortunes," McGraw says, "but it is the result of the harder fight that is being put up against us."

His team has sustained many injuries. He figures that the Pirates, the Robins and the Reds are in the race for the whole season.

The showing of the Detroit Tigers, who have won eight straight games and have crashed into the first division from a place near the bottom has been the big feature of the week in the major leagues.

16—Intelligent Practice.

Intelligent practice! That, and enough of it, spell the difference between a hopelessly poor game of golf and the best average game within the physical and mental powers of the player.

After a certain point is reached in golfing skill, there can be no possible improvement by playing the game. All subsequent improvement must come from intelligent practice. It is this intelligent practice alone that will enable the player to duplicate indefinitely the good strokes from which good shots alone can come.

That brings about a fuller description of practice of shots. The player has taken instruction and tries, by intelligent practice, to co-ordinate mind and muscle so perfectly that he always will duplicate the necessary mechanics of the stroke, or come so close to it that he himself can locate the error. It is very necessary that this be thoroughly understood. In making an approach shot for instance, intelligent practice does not mean concentration on getting the ball near the hole. It means concentrating on making the swing that he has been taught and experience has shown is the right one to get the ball near the hole. The expert does not need to go through all that preliminary thought before making a shot. His mental and physical processes are nearly automatic. It is more a matter of instinct with him or her. But the real expert is one out of ten thousand and you can rest assured he has gone through the concentration on making the swing correctly or he never would have become an expert.

And the expert himself must go through his "dally dozen" in trying out his various shots. Between his third and fourth rounds in the National Open of 1924, Cyril Walker practiced a solid hour to straighten out his mid-iron shot. Perhaps it was that very practice which let him make the approach at the sixteenth and which guaranteed him the championship. The final thought is to practice each stroke intelligently up to the point where it becomes as nearly automatic as possible.

CROSBY WINS

BRAINERD SUNDAY

TRACY BESTED POSTEN IN A
PRETTY PITCHING
DUEL

POSTEN, PITCHING FOR LOCALS
STRUCK OUT SEVENTEEN
MEN

Tracy bested Posten in a pretty pitching battle, which ended 3 to 2 in Crosby's favor, yesterday.

Posten pitching for Brainerd, struck out 17 men and allowed six hits. He was in splendid form and should have turned in a win for Brainerd, but his team seems to have lack the punch with men on bases.

Tracy pitched great ball for the ore heavers, allowing only five hits and was credited with seven strikeouts.

Both Crosby and Brainerd gave a pretty exhibition of baseball playing. Time and again the locals' infield pulled out of some bad holes by some fast fielding, and the outfield worked together just as nicely.

Norman caught a mighty fine game behind the bat. Posten and Norman worked together like a big league battery.

Crosby also played fine ball in the field. Kline, Crosby's third baseman, robbed Brainerd of a few hits by his one-handed catches.

The two teams earned all of their runs, as neither side scored an error. Wear, Richmond and Middlebrook brought in the scores for Crosby; Ringer and Peterson chalked up the tallies for Brainerd.

The Brainerd nine is a newly organized team, and with a hired pitcher could give the local fans some mighty interesting baseball. The support of the city is urged with the promise that fans will be well rewarded. Posten and Norman are working into the kind of a battery that will be hard to beat.

Brainerd plays at Buckman on July 4th, and at New York Mills on Sunday, July 5th.

Following is the score by innings:

Hurlingham, England, June 29.—America's polo team, victors over the British team, in the recent matches for the international military cup, was defeated here by the Jodhpur team of India by a score of 13 to 3.

The Americans were defeated by the Jodhpur team in a practice game before the cup matches. The Jodhpurs, including three Indian princes, lined up as follows: Thapur Prithi Singh, No. 1; Capt. A. H. Williams, No. 2; Rao Raja Hanut Singh, No. 3, and Thakur Ram Singh, back.

"Proud Flesh" at Lyceum Tonight

Harrison Ford recently had the time of his life making a picture. The film was "Proud Flesh," King Vidor's latest production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which is showing at the Lyceum tonight, and the reason for Mr. Ford's light-heartedness was because he had an opportunity to play a comedy role, a rarity for him, being a romantic actor.

"Proud Flesh" is taken from Lawrence Sanders' novel of that name, and the character Ford depicts is that of Don Jaime, a member of the Spanish nobility. This noble person is a nonchalant youth, as fastidious about sartorial embellishments at breakfast as at midnight.

Throughout the entire picture Ford was forced to maintain a perfect appearance, wearing capes, silk hats, and patent leather boots: this was a little bit uncomfortable, but the fun of the role more than made up for any discomfort.

Hollywood, June 29.—After shunning the public for nearly two years, Charlie Chaplin makes a dramatic return to the film today with the comic masterpiece of his career, "The Gold Rush."

In "The Gold Rush," the Charlie Chaplin as he is known to screen fans everywhere comes to life again, personifying all the old-time comedy, pathos and romance.

For 18 months, the fervid Chaplin has dedicated his life and soul to creating this comic film classic. During that time he has been a virtual hermit, a recluse to all except his closest friends and studio associates.

With a dramatic gesture, the filmmaker now emerges from his figurative shell, and makes the greatest bid of his career for a renewal of favor with his multitude of former patrons.

"This is the picture I want to be remembered by," he says, almost pleadingly. It is my greatest comedy—yes, it is my masterpiece."

Chaplin's genius is reflected in every foot of film that goes out with "The Gold Rush." The comedian personally directed and supervised each detail of the filming, and his uncanny technique dominates the finished product.

An All-Chaplin Film

The comedian wrote his own script directed the filming, cut and edited each reel, and wrote his own titles.

Previous Chaplin comedies had very little story structure. But in "The Gold Rush" he has created a semblance of sequence, wringing humor and pathos from the spectacle of a valiant weakling striving to overcome the traditional perils of the early Alaskan gold-seekers.

In the role of hard-luck sardough, dressed in the sloppy trousers, cumbersome brogans, trick derby and cane of early association, Chaplin has twisted the sufferings of the Alaskan pioneers into a masterful mixture of humor and tragedy.

"The Gold Rush" is being released here today. The film will not be circulated for general public consumption until in the fall.

Meantime, Chaplin is gradually emerging from solitude. He has faith in his master stroke of comedy, and with the completed reels getting off to market, a load of worry is lifted from his mind.

Stepping Out Again

He is a familiar figure again in Hollywood's night life. He dances and dines in public, a habit he had studiously foregone for many months.

Lita Gray, the 17-year old school-girl who married Charlie at Empalme, Mexico, on Nov. 25, last, does not accompany the comedian on these excursions.

Lita was Chaplin's leading lady in "The Gold Rush" until the marriage, when she too went into seclusion and was literally cut from the picture. The early scenes were re-taken, with

Pilgrims Walked to Rome

Two unusual Anno Santo pilgrims recently presented themselves for confession at St. Peter's. One was from Oberammergau, in Bavaria, the other from Scotland. Both had made the entire pilgrimage to the Eternal City on foot, except, of course, the passage of the English channel, by the Scot. The clergy raised a fund to permit them to return home by railroad. In the first Anno Santo, 625 years ago, and many subsequent ones, the great majority of the pilgrims came on foot. It is still customary for young German boys and girls to walk to Rome in the spring, sometimes with piety in their hearts, sometimes merely with the zest for adventure. Some affect the trade of troubadour and gayly sing to the guitar in the streets, accepting, even requesting, pennies to buy their evening meal.

Improved Sandals

Spring sandals strapped on like skates and with two stout steel coils fastened between the bottom and a lower leather-padded sole, are now on the market for boys' and girls' amusement. They are made in five different sizes and stiffness of springs for small and larger children, and the springs are so flexible that there is practically no danger of turning the ankle. Walking or jumping with them is said to strengthen the muscles of the feet and legs and besides providing healthful sport the sandals lead to the development of new games for the playground.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

STILL ROOM IN BENNY'S SHOES

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

New York, June 29.—When another vacancy occurs among the ring champions and some one asks the New York Boxing Commission who is the new champion, it is likely that the commission will quote in reply that good line—"I'll bite, who is the champion?"

Sad results have been borne of two attempts by the commission to get around the tradition of the ring that a title can be transferred only by a tap on the whiskers.

The Duke of Muldoon, when he was ruling with the iron rod, tried to establish champions by edict but it didn't take. When more practical minds subdued the Duke, the plan of getting a champion by common consent in an elimination tournament was tried and it was hardly more successful.

When Johnny Dundee handed over the world's featherweight title with the announcement that he couldn't make the weight, the commission organized a tournament among the leading contenders and when the final round had been staged the commission announced that Kid Kaplan was the new world's champion.

The general reaction to the announcement was—"Who said so and what of it?"

Dundee reduced a few pounds, after the commission had gone through the labor of putting over the tournament, and he applied the works to the whole thing when he said—"I'm still the champion. Who said I wasn't?"

Even if the featherweight tournament didn't carry the official title of a champion for the winner, it did produce in Kid Kaplan a good fighter and one who perhaps can beat any one who disputes his claim, but the lightweight tournament which came after Benny Leonard retired, turned out to be a flivver.

Jimmy Goodrich of Buffalo and Stanislaus Loayza of Chile, survived the semi-final round of the eliminations and they are to meet for the "title" here on July 6. Neither one can be taken seriously as a champion. It isn't the commission's fault that such ordinary timber came through to the finals, but the idea is wrong.

The theory of an international tournament is fine but it isn't practical as it is too big a job to handle and the matter of finances is too difficult to arrange to get the leading fighters interested.

Sammy Mandell and Sid Terris, two worthy candidates for the title, made much more money by remaining out of the tournament than they would have if they had bound themselves to work on any dates set by the commission. Mandell was in one round, of course, but he was forced into it by the commission.

Three years ago when Man o' War was retired to the stud it was the general opinion that there never would be another one like him. He was judged the super-horse, the last word in the skill of crossing blood lines to develop the perfect horse. Now there comes along his son, the handsome American Flag, and smart turfmen believe that he has it in him to equal the fame and glory of his sire.

It just goes to show how long fame lasts. Three years ago, sport fans were acclaiming the greatest swimmer that ever lived. Now if you happen to mention his name you might be asked—"Who is Norman Ross?" Three years from now you may hear—"Who was Johnny Weismuller?"

No record is safe in these advanced days when improvement in form is getting so much more out of physical strength than it did ten years ago. There are two records that look to be safe for many years, however—the mark for the hundred-yard dash and Babe Ruth's home run record.

Human speed seems to have reached its limit in sprinting. The nine-second man never may live but some authorities like Lawson Robertson, the head track coach of the American Olympic team, believe that most anything can happen.

McGRAW CLAIMS
BALL TOO LIVELY,
MEN IN DANGER

GIANT LEADER VIRTUALLY DEMANDS STANDARDIZED BASEBALLS

PLAYERS SAY PITCHERS AND INFELDERS IN DANGER OF THEIR LIVES

By HENRY L. FARRELL
New York, June 29.—General protest against the use of the lively ball are causing so much stir among the players and the managers in the major leagues that the owners may have to make some changes to protect the players.

Ever since Babe Ruth started the voyage for long hitting the players have contended more life was put in the ball, but the charge was steadfastly denied by the presidents of the two leagues.

This year the players claim that the ball is livelier than ever and they complain that pitchers and infielders are actually in danger of their lives. John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, came out today with virtually a demand that something be done to standardize the ball. He said there was no doubt the ball being used now was too lively and it was a grave danger to the players.

More players have been hurt already this season than in any two seasons in the past, and it does not seem that clumsy fielding is the cause or that pitching has become so inferior that ordinary batters can knock the hide off the ball.

Although ball manufacturers maintain that no change has been made in the specifications, there is no way to explain the fact that 579 homers have been rapped out this year. This time last year there were only 348.

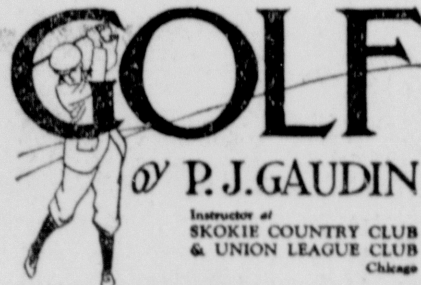

McGraw is not the only manager to admit that there is something wrong with the ball, but he is the first to demand a change.

"The loss of the big lead we had early in the season is not due entirely to our misfortunes," McGraw says, "but it is the result of the harder fight that is being put up against us."

His team has sustained many injuries. He figures that the Pirates, the Robins and the Reds are in the race for the whole season.

The showing of the Detroit Tigers, who have won eight straight games and have crashed into the first division from a place near the bottom has been the big feature of the week in the major leagues.

16—Intelligent Practice.

Intelligent practice! That, and enough of it, spell the difference between a hopelessly poor game of golf and the best average game within the physical and mental powers of the player.

After a certain point is reached in golfing skill, there can be no possible improvement by playing the game. All subsequent improvement must come from intelligent practice. It is this intelligent practice alone that will enable the player to duplicate indefinitely the good strokes from which good shots alone can come.

That brings about a fuller description of practice of shots. The player has taken instruction and tries, by intelligent practice, to co-ordinate mind and muscle so perfectly that he always will duplicate the necessary mechanics of the stroke, or come so close to it that he himself can locate the error. It is very necessary that this be thoroughly understood. In making an approach shot for instance, intelligent practice does not mean concentration on getting the ball near the hole. It means concentrating on making the swing that he has been taught and experience has shown is the right one to get the ball near the hole. The expert does not need to go through all that preliminary thought before making a shot. His mental and physical processes are nearly automatic. It is more a matter of instinct with him or her. But the real expert is one out of ten thousand and you can rest assured he has gone through the concentration on making the swing correctly or he never would have become an expert.

And the expert himself must go through his "daily dozen" in trying out his various shots. Between his third and fourth rounds in the National Open of 1924, Cyril Walker practiced a solid hour to straighten out his mid-iron shot. Perhaps it was that very practice which let him make the approach at the sixteenth and which guaranteed him the championship. The final thought is to practice each stroke intelligently up to the point where it becomes as nearly automatic as possible.

CROSBY WINS

3 TO 2 FROM
BRAINERD SUNDAYTRACY BESTED POSTEN IN A
PRETTY PITCHING
DUELPOSTEN, PITCHING FOR LOCALS
STRUCK OUT SEVENTEEN
MEN

Tracy bested Posten in a pretty pitching battle, which ended 3 to 2 in Crosby's favor, yesterday.

Posten pitching for Brainerd, struck out 17 men and allowed six hits. He was in splendid form and should have turned in a win for Brainerd, but his team seems to have lack the punch with men on bases.

Tracy pitched great ball for the ore heavers, allowing only five hits and was credited with seven strikeouts.

Both Crosby and Brainerd gave a pretty exhibition of baseball playing. Time and again the locals' infield pulled out of some bad holes by some fast fielding, and the outfield worked together just as nicely.

Norman caught a mighty fine game behind the bat. Posten and Norman worked together like a big league battery.

Crosby also played fine ball in the field. Kline, Crosby's third baseman, robbed Brainerd of a few hits by his one-handed catches.

The two teams earned all of their runs, as neither side scored an error. Weare, Richmond and Middlebrook brought in the scores for Crosby; Ringer and Peterson chalked up the tallies for Brainerd.

The Brainerd nine is a newly organized team, and with a hired pitcher could give the local fans some mighty interesting baseball. The support of the city is urged with the promise that fans will be well rewarded. Posten and Norman are working into the kind of a battery that will be hard to beat.

Brainerd plays at Buckman on July 4th, and at New York Mills on Sunday, July 5th.

Following is the score by innings: Brainerd 000 001 100—2 Crosby 100 100 001—3

Hurlingham, England, June 29.—America's polo team, victors over the British team, in the recent matches for the international military cup, was defeated here by the Jodhpur team of India by a score of 13 to 3.

The Americans were defeated by the Jodhpur team in a practice game before the cup matches. The Jodhpurs, including three Indian princes, lined up as follows: Thapur Prithi Singh, No. 1; Capt. A. H. Williams, No. 2; Rao Raja Hanut Singh, No. 3, and Thakur Ram Singh, back.

Vancouver, B. C., June 29. — J. Hawkes and G. L. Patterson, Australian net stars, arrived here en route to Montreal, where they will meet the Canadian Davis cup tennis team Aug. 13. They will not play any games here, they said.

We are not without a twinge of envy for J. T. Scopes. A young high school teacher who can give a simple lesson in biology and become a great national menace is getting into the hall of fame on an uncomplimentary ticket.—The New Yorker.

Pilgrims Walked to Rome

Two unusual Anno Santo pilgrims recently presented themselves for confession at St. Peter's. One was from Oberammergau, in Bavaria, the other from Scotland. Both had made the entire pilgrimage to the Eternal City on foot, except, of course, the passage of the English channel, by the Scot. The clergy raised a fund to permit them to return home by railroad. In the first Anno Santo, 625 years ago, and many subsequent ones, the great majority of the pilgrims came on foot. It is still customary for young German boys and girls to walk to Rome in the spring, sometimes with plecty in their hearts, sometimes merely with the zest for adventure. Some affect the trade of troubadour and gayly sing to the guitar in the streets, accepting, even requesting, pennies to buy their evening meal.

Improved Sandals

Spring sandals strapped on like skates and with two stout steel coils fastened between the bottom and a lower leather-padded sole, are now on the market for boys' and girls' amusement. They are made in five different sizes and stiffness of springs for small and larger children, and the springs are so flexible that there is practically no danger of turning the ankle. Walking or jumping with them is said to strengthen the muscles of the feet and legs and besides providing healthful sport the sandals lead to the development of new games for the playground.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Job for Police

Early in the morning a woman telephoned for the Reading (Pa.) police to come to her house, and upon the arrival of the officers in a car, she requested them to compel her son to take his cough medicine, which the lad had refused to do. The police declined jurisdiction.
